The Cookhouse Lab offers a collaborative, crowdsourced approach to InsurTech development.

(Toronto, ON) November 17, 2016 — The Cookhouse Lab, led by Chris Murumets of LOGiQ³ and Sven Roehl, of msg global solutions, offers a space for collaboration and a methodology for professionals to use to create the technology consumers now demand. The Lab, located in downtown Toronto, welcomes P & C and life insurance experts, financial-services professionals, entrepreneurs and academics to collaborate on original ideas, combine concepts, build new prototypes, and fund new initiatives. One of the key components to this collaboration process is the idea of “The Expert Crowd”, a group of collaborators in the lab, working with global experts who virtually contribute to the lab through a defined process and technology platform.

“The world is changing,” said Murumets, Co-Founder and Co-CEO of LOGiQ³ Group. “Insurance is changing – particularly for insurance companies that are faced with the challenge of building a customer relationship beyond premium collection and claim adjudication. We believe open collaboration and innovation will drive that change by helping us reimagine insurance products and how they are accessed and delivered.”

Sven Roehl, EVP and head of Insurance Innovation for msg adds, “The Cookhouse Lab gives insurers the creative place to think out of the box, invent and shape the future of insurance. It is a test kitchen in which insurers collaborate with each other and combine organizational knowledge with other ‘ingredients’ such as innovation experts, legal counsel, designers and entrepreneurs to create the customer experience of tomorrow.”

Insurers are invited to send individuals or teams to the Lab starting in February 2017. The Lab will develop customer-focused insurance technology through open collaboration, crowdsourcing and by combining insurer, investor and IT expertise.
